BIG CONTRACT FOR VERMONT.

West Rutland Marble Concern will Take a Year to Get Out Material.

Rutland, June 11.—The G. P. Eastman Marble company of West Rutland have been awarded the contract to furnish all the American marble to be used in interior decorative work of the Astor-Tilden-Lenox library at 42nd street and 5th avenue, New York, commonly known as the New York public library. In bidding for this contract the Vermont concern had no competitors nearly all the largest marble concerns in the country. The contract is one of the largest of the kind which has come to Vermont in some time and the selection of the Eastman marble is evidence that the company can produce a grade highly valuable for sculptural work.

This contract will take all the marble white layers for more than a year. Work on the big contract has already been begun, the blocks being taken out in 15 to 20 tons sizes. The Eastman marble as well as all the other interior marble—the contract for the whole amounting to three and a quarter millions of dollars—will be finished by the John Pierce company, New York.

The library for the interior of which the West Rutland concern is to furnish the decorative white marble is to be one of the largest marble buildings in the country and it will cost about $14,000,000.
